

Journal Pre-proof

Charlie and Joyce at the Intersection of Science and Art

John Allman

PII: S0301-0082(20)30177-5

DOI: <https://doi.org/10.1016/j.pneurobio.2020.101922>

Reference: PRONEU 101922

To appear in: Progress in Neurobiology

Please cite this article as: Allman J, Charlie and Joyce at the Intersection of Science and Art, Progress in Neurobiology (2020), doi: <https://doi.org/10.1016/j.pneurobio.2020.101922>

This is a PDF file of an article that has undergone enhancements after acceptance, such as the addition of a cover page and metadata, and formatting for readability, but it is not yet the definitive version of record. This version will undergo additional copyediting, typesetting and review before it is published in its final form, but we are providing this version to give early visibility of the article. Please note that, during the production process, errors may be discovered which could affect the content, and all legal disclaimers that apply to the journal pertain.

© 2020 Published by Elsevier.

Charlie and Joyce at the Intersection of Science and Art

John Allman

Caltech, The division of biology and biological engineering

Email: cebus@caltech.edu

One evening over sushi in late 2014, Doris Tsao and I came up with the idea of inviting Charlie Gross and Joyce Carol Oates to come to Caltech to have a public conversation about science and art. The idea was received enthusiastically by our colleagues, which led to the Division of Biology and Biological Engineering and the Division of the Humanities and Social Sciences through the James Michelin Distinguished Visitors program sponsoring “At the Intersection of Art and Sciences: a conversation with Joyce Carol Oates and Charles Gross” which played to a packed house of more than 300 at Caltech on April 29, 2015. Here is one image grabbed from the video made of their conversation. Charlie and Joyce are discussing how the amnesic subject, HM, whom she learned about from Charlie, inspired her to write A Man Without A Shadow. Her novel is about a neuropsychologist who is studying HM and falls in love with him even though he cannot remember her! Their fascinating conversation can be seen at: <https://www.youtube.com/watch?v=dyRuSTjQmVg>.

Image 1: Charlie and Joyce from “At the Intersection of Art and Sciences: A Conversation with Joyce Carol Oates and Charles Gross” in Caltech, 2015.

